BLENDED LEARNING

POCKET PEDAGOGY

WHAT IS IT?

Blended learning is a mix of classroom teaching and online digital learning.

Traditionally there are two types of learning enviornment: classroom-based and online learning.

Blended learning is somwhere between these two.

WHAT DOES IT REALLY LOOK LIKE?

- Making use of sofware such as Google Classroom to set pupils tasks specific to their learning needs. But some proponents have argued for radically different classroom models.
- Allowing children to move through digital content at their own pace with access to instruction materials (videos on how to do the skill, for example)
- Complementing the learning completed in the classroom with the digital learning completed at home.

WHY IS IT USEFUL?

As children complete some of the key learning on a computer, this allows the teacher to concentrate on the depth of learning - the application of skills and the developing of higher order thinking skills.
